

MASTER OF SCIENCE IN FINANCE

Invest in Your Future

Financial leadership plays a critical role in determining how a company will meet its strategic goals. Northeastern University's MS in Finance (MSF) program helps you build the skills that are essential for a successful career in finance.

The MSF program provides rigorous training in finance, helping you to develop your analytical and financial management skills. The program allows you to pursue study in either corporate finance or investments.

Northeastern's MSF curriculum is taught by full-time faculty, recognized as expert researchers by leading industry journals. In addition to extensive academic training in their field, our faculty have led major organizations, served as consultants, and hold additional credentials, including CFA® and CFP® certifications. MSF students can enhance their networking opportunities as a result of their close connections to faculty and industry leaders.

Realize Dividends

Northeastern's MSF program offers convenience and flexibility for busy working professionals. You can complete the program in as little as 18 months. Courses are scheduled so that you may take two courses in one evening. The pace and schedule are entirely up to you. MSF students proceed through the program with many of the same classmates, which enhances networking opportunities. All classes are held at the Batterymarch campus, located in Boston's downtown financial district. You also have the option of taking electives at Northeastern's main Boston campus.

Gain Real-world Experience

You can take advantage of Northeastern's MBA overseas summer study programs to help advance your knowledge of global business. You may choose from study tours of up to two weeks in duration to selected countries that are determined annually based on student feedback.

As an MSF student, you can also gain practical experience in investing by participating in the University's 360 Huntington Fund. Students conduct research on equities and make recommendations to the fund management.

Northeastern University's MS in Finance program is right for you if:

- You are ready to advance your career in finance.
- You are eager to learn from highly qualified faculty.
- You are interested in pursuing a CFA® or CFP® certification.
- You want a program that you can complete in as little as 18 months.
